About the Project.

ActionAid Ethiopia (AAE) is a gender justice, good governance, and poverty eradication organization. It envisions a country where all enjoys their rights equally and live a decent life. Its heart lies on gender equality where it designs its frameworks and operations on women's and girls' empowerment and abolishing root causes of Violence against women and girls. Its interventions are guided by the Human Rights Based Approach, Transformative Feminist Leadership, and Intersectional Feminist Analysis tools. AAE has been implementing programs in Ethiopia under both humanitarian and development contexts for 35 years. Young people especially young girls are primarily target of the organization in terms of working with them, their organizations, and networks. AAE has been implementing various projects in order to realize the achievement of missions and intended objectives.

Strategic Partnership Agreement (SPA II) is a four-year project (2022-2025) that has been undergoing implementation with the technical and financial support of AADK through the fund of DANIDA. The overall objective of the program is that young people, especially women and marginalized people, enjoy fundamental rights through improved access to well-resourced programs and public services and enjoy improved, sustainable livelihoods, resilience, and protection including in climate disasters, fragile situations, and protracted crisis contexts in Ethiopia. AAE has been working with local partners and key stakeholders to support youth, especially young women to access youth-led spaces and platforms, advancing their digital skills and knowledge and strengthening their capacity. And it aims to build climate-resilient livelihoods, meaningfully engage with government line ministries and implementers on climate change adaptation and mitigation and build leadership in humanitarian preparedness and response.

In FY2024, the project has been facilitating the implementation of various activities focusing on strengthening the capacities of young people to have more actions on accountability, climate and humanitarian's crisis prevention and response. Most of the interventions have supported project structures like the local youth groups/global platforms, social accountability committee, gender change agents, young women safe spaces and local youth volunteer groups. Young people have got a lot of space to interact and learn each other with various themes; gender equality, climate financing and peace building. Unlike the previous years, collaborative actions have been initiated at national level in terms of supporting movement groups in climate and peace interventions. In addition, humanitarian response interventions have been carried out in drought and conflict affected areas of the project considering the existing fragility. Similarly, there have been some post conflict actions to support affected communities' members as well as survivors to gain control of their life through psychosocial service and economic support.

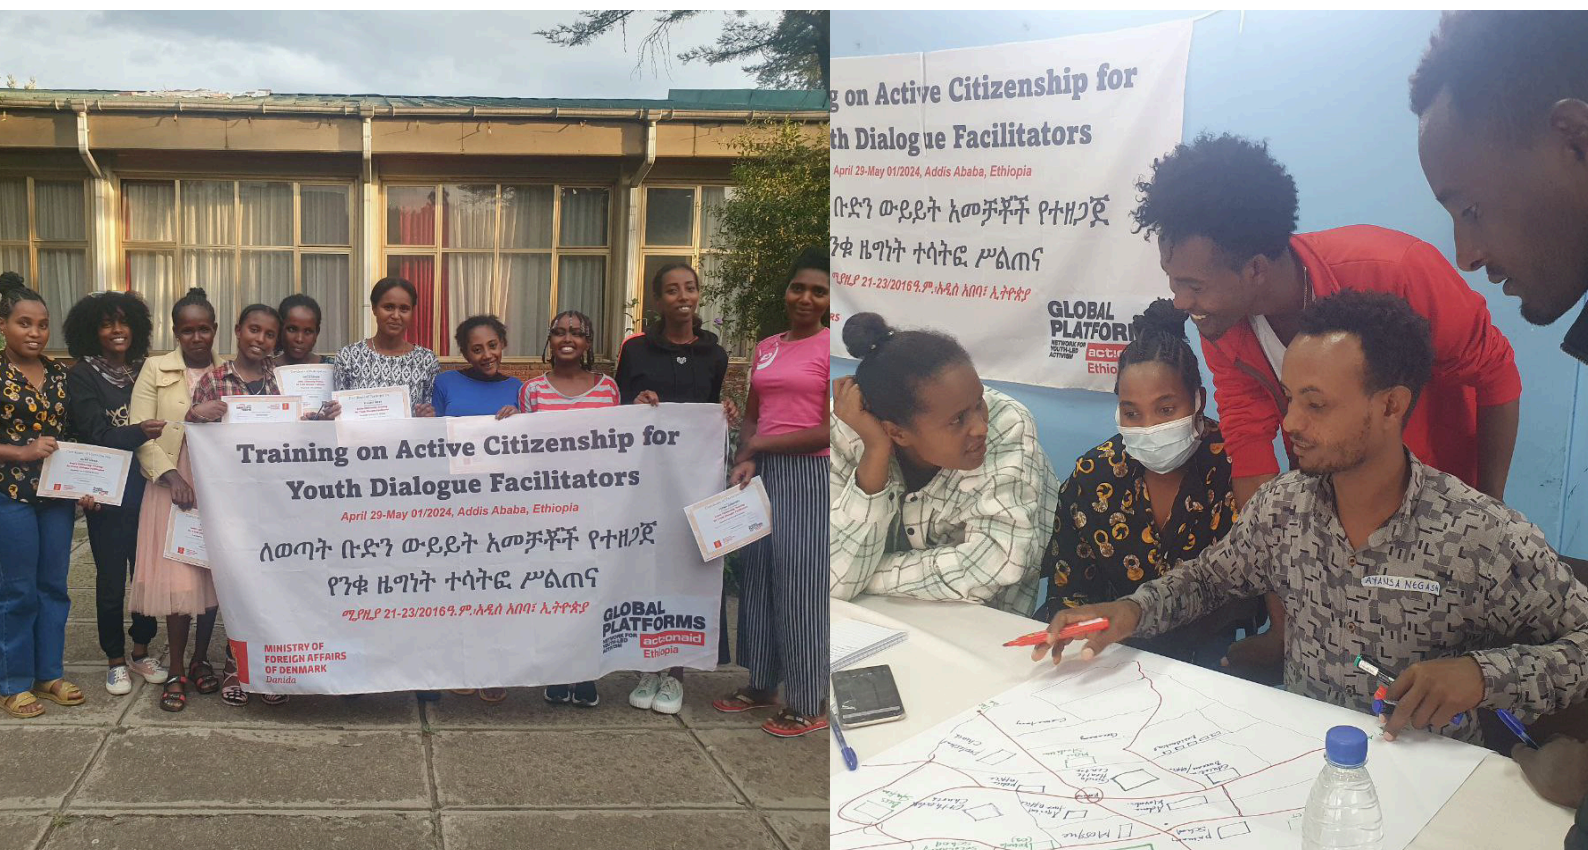

In this edition, key project interventions in the physical period have been recorded and documented as booklet to give information and data about the progressive actions and achievements of the project over the year.

1. Provision of Active Citizenship training for Youth Dialogue Facilitators

Global platform Ethiopia has created a safe space for young people especially young girls for capacity building, empowerment, and creation of opportunities for personal and communal growth. In relation to this, a three-day Active Citizenship training for 25 youth dialogue facilitators took place in Addis Ababa at the Red Cross Training Centre from April 29 to May 1, 2024. The training was aimed at being an inception point of a chain of events which include cascading of the training by youth in each local GPs youth groups in the form of youth dialogues as well as discussion sessions with Social Accountability Committee (SAC) members and duty bearers. The aim of this training was to give participants skills of conducting a successful youth dialogue facilitation skill for behavioural and attitudinal change of young people towards active citizenship and enable them to be the driving force of positive social change in their communities at local and national levels.

Young people from all local GPs actively engaged in the training, acquiring knowledge and competencies in conducting youth dialogues and gaining valuable tools to fulfil their roles as active citizens. The training placed significant emphasis on empowering young individuals to exercise social accountability, enhance their participation in ensuring gender-responsive services, and advocate for various issues, such as climate justice and social justice. It also supported young people in gaining and enhancing life skills and digital skills for enhanced youth participation in Active Citizenship. This training was facilitated through developed and adapted training manual which has pre and post assessments to evaluate the understanding of trainees before and after training.

Throughout the three days training, young people gained skills on conducting successful youth dialogues to further reach their peers in starting up meaningful discussions for collective action in different sectors. The training also provided a conducive environment for experience sharing and cultural exchange between young people from the different parts of the operational areas.

2. International Women's Day Commemorated Through the Coordination of Local partner Young Women Christian Association /YWCA/

On March 13, 2024, a significant event was held at Addis Ababa Grove Garden Walk to commemorate International Women's Day, with a focus on advocating for Gender Responsive Public Services (GRPS). The gathering, which included 50 participants from various sectors such as national government offices, youth groups, and women-led CSOs, featured presentations on GRPS principles and gender-responsive budgeting. Notable speakers included representatives from the Ministry of Women and Social Affairs, the Ministry of Planning and Development, and the Ethiopian Women with Disabilities Network. The event also included a panel discussion addressing gender equality actions, gender budgeting issues, and barriers faced by Ethiopian women with disabilities.

Additionally, the Addis Ababa GP youths showcased their advocacy through artistic performances and an art exhibition, while Ameya GP youths shared insights from their social accountability practices on local gender budgeting. Various publication materials and digital advocacy efforts further promoted the event's message. A joint action plan was developed, increased participation of young girls, reflecting our project's objective to empower young women and girls, and enhanced student awareness of peace and good governance. Overall, the celebration was a resounding success, effectively engaging and educating the community on crucial issues, inspiring action toward a more inclusive and equitable society, and providing valuable insights into government work and implementation gaps in gender-responsive budgeting.

3. Practice of Gardening Initiatives at School Level to Promote Youth Habits in farming activity

The SPA II partner Young Women Christian Association has partnered with Addis Zemen School in Addis Ababa to enhance agricultural demonstration activities, foster collaborations, and involve high school students. The school's environment club has taken charge of these activities, diligently caring for the seeds and plants. Their efforts have resulted in visually appealing planting areas throughout the school grounds that engage all students. The vegetable grown, cabbage, is intended for the school's feeding program. This collaboration has reinforced the school's commitment to sustainable agriculture and nurtured environmental stewardship among the students. This year, efforts were expanded to include Artist Hachalu Hundesa Secondary School in Elfeta operation area.

Similarly, support was provided to Kimir Dingay and Guna Begimeder High Schools in South Gonder Zone for their vegetable gardening and green environment initiatives. These gardens serve as both environmental protection efforts and valuable educational and income-generating resources. Environmental clubs and school staff collaborate to cultivate gardens within the school grounds. Each school utilizes 0.25 hectares for gardening purposes; Students gain hands-on experience by growing seedlings, which are then used for further gardening or sold to generate income for the school. Urban gardening extends beyond school grounds, providing economic benefits to families. Participants engage in gardening in available home spaces, which improves household income. Though exact profit figures are unknown, estimates range from 500 to 1,500 birr per month.

4. Facilitation of Post-conflict Psycho-Social Support Training for Volunteers and Provision of Services for Survivors

A total of 20 participants (5 male) from the Peace Ambassadors, EFAST, and GP groups attended a three-day training program focused on post-conflict psycho-social support, first aid, and trauma healing. This training specifically targeted young people, especially women, who are vital in building resilient communities during crises.

The training effectively equipped participants with the knowledge and skills to address the emotional and psychological needs of conflict-affected individuals and communities, respond to medical emergencies, and support trauma healing. The project also aims to develop a youth leadership program in collaboration with peace clubs and student parliaments. This program will offer students opportunities to enhance critical leadership skills, including communication, decision-making, governance, and participation in justice systems, such as the court hiring process at Debre Tabor First Instance Court and the customary conflict resolution mechanism at Kimir Dingay.

On the other hand, a survivor of a forced underage marriage was successfully supported in obtaining legal services. Collaboration with Woreda-level service providers (WCAO, Police, and Attorney General) ensured the survivor received medical support and legal services. facilitated the referral and linkage process by covering some costs, allowing the survivor to receive the necessary legal support. Formal confirmation of the case and support was obtained from the Woreda Police Office and Woreda Attorney General.

5. Young Women Play a Role in FGM Prevention

Young women safe spaces, organized by the GPs, includes regular meetings by young women on issues that concern them. Participants discuss gender-based violence (GBV), harmful traditional practices such as female genital mutilation (FGM), and early marriage. Given that many schools were closed, which exacerbated practices like GBV, FGM, and early marriage, the safe spaces provided critical support and education. Although these discussions significantly increased awareness among the members about these issues, the awareness creation did not stop there.

Following the dialogues, the Rama Youth Association organized an educational session at the church, inviting religious leaders to participate. This initiative aimed to raise community awareness about the harmful effects of FGM and early marriage and to seek their support in fostering a safer environment for young girls. Previously, the community had embraced harmful practices due to longstanding traditions and the reliance on education from religious leaders, especially in the absence of formal schooling.

As a result of these efforts, three children were prevented from undergoing circumcision, and awareness was raised among 1,083 community members (577 female), demonstrating the tangible positive outcomes of the dialogue and awareness initiatives.

6. Organized Young People Took Climate Actions and Anti-GBV Social Movements

Through the SPAll project, young people who are organized at national and local levels have been operating in different activities to create spaces for youth, practicing agroecological activities in the demo plot lands and promoting volunteerism, peace building and responding to humanitarian crises in their localities. Connected to this, young people in GP have been supported by the GOLD modality to conduct two social movements in Ameya and Addis Ababa. The social movement initiated at Addis Ababa called for “enhanced multistakeholder mobilization to prevent and respond to gender-based violence (GBV)”, aiming to create awareness, foster understanding, and encourage community action to combat GBV. On the other hand, the social movement conducted by the Ameya GP social movement group, targeted environmental issues, specifically dry waste management, to promote community participation in environmental protection with a title of “Clean up Gindo town”.

As part of the anti-GBV movement, community conversations were held with young men aged 19–25 and 26–50 in Arada sub-city. The objective was to raise awareness about gender-based violence (GBV), women's rights, and criminal law. The discussions aimed to educate the attendees on the importance of respecting women's rights, preventing GBV, and the legal consequences of committing GBV-related crimes. The social movement team facilitated the discussions, presented findings from the previous assessment on GBV prevalence, and engaged the attendees in dialogue. Discussions between duty bearers and the social movement group were conducted in woreda 5 and woreda 2 in Arada Sub-city. The youth raised concerns about gaps in addressing gender-based violence (GBV) and emphasized the importance of prevention and collaboration based on their assessment report. They highlighted the need for education and awareness to change societal attitudes towards GBV.

Community conversation and discussion with duty bearers at woreda 2 and woreda 5

The movement focused towards enhancing multi-stakeholder mobilization to prevent and respond to GBV has resulted in proposed collaboration between GP youths and duty bearers. The duty bearers proposed involving GP members to raise awareness among elder community members about reporting GBV cases. This recognizes the need to enhance awareness raising and seeks GP members' support in spreading information and encouraging reporting. By collaborating with the community and stakeholders, the initiative promotes a joint effort to address underreporting of GBV cases among elder community members. Participants in the community conversation have made commitments to making sure GBV cases they come across are reported to the appropriate bodies.

Young people engaged in the social movement initiated at Addis Ababa conducted school outreach campaigns. During the outreach program, members of social movement team raised on the definition of GBV, the types of violence that fall under this category, and the impact of GBV on individuals. The presentation also included information on how young girls can protect themselves from violence and seek help if they are victims of GBV. Members of the Social Movement group also provided information on reporting mechanisms for young girls who experience GBV.

Youth conducting awareness outreach campaign at school levels

After conducting the school outreach campaign, young people in GP organized a drawing competition to actively involve students and encourage them to express their thoughts on gender-based violence (GBV). The aim of the competition was to provide a creative platform for the students to depict the impact of GBV and ways to prevent it through their artwork. During the competition, the students were given the opportunity to showcase their artistic skills and create drawings that conveyed powerful messages about GBV. They were encouraged to think critically about the issue and depict its effects on individuals and society. The winning art pieces were then turned into posters that were distributed to the woreda youth center.

The Cleanup Gindo town social movement initiative resulted in a tri-partite MOU that was signed to delegate the responsibility of dry waste management to the town authorities. The MOU was signed between the Woreda Environmental and Protection Authority, the Social Movement group and the Ameya LRP. Another result gained is infrastructure development. A dry waste collection pit was constructed by the town municipality, demonstrating a tangible impact of the initiative. As a tangible outcome of the initiative, the town municipality took an active role in constructing a dedicated dry waste collection pit within the local area. This physical infrastructure development represented a significant milestone in the social movement group's efforts to address the dry waste management challenges faced by the community.

In addition to the comprehensive awareness creation event of Clean up Gindo Town, the initiative also implemented a roadside campaign. This campaign was designed to reach a broader audience within the community and raise awareness about the importance of effective waste management practices. The roadside campaigns served as a strategic platform to engage the community on the ground, directly addressing the issue of waste management in a visible and accessible manner. Beyond the awareness-raising activities and hands-on engagement, the initiative also sought to foster a deeper sense of community ownership and involvement in addressing the issue of dry waste management. To achieve this, the social movement group focused on collecting petitions from various societal groups within the local context. They were able to collect 750 signatures in this activity. The petition collection process served as a mechanism to directly engage and empower residents to take responsibility for waste management within their own neighborhoods and communities.

Road side campaign at Gindo town, signed petition and sanitation material distribution

The Clean-up Gindo town movement incorporated a comprehensive awareness creation event that brought together 50 participants from diverse sectors. This event included representatives from government offices (GOs), community-based organizations (CBOs), community leaders, and youth groups. The objective of this event was to establish a shared understanding and collective commitment to addressing the issue of dry waste management within the community. The initiative recognized the importance of prioritizing the health and safety of the individuals engaged in waste collection and management activities. This was a critical consideration, as these tasks often involve physical labor, exposure to hazardous materials, and potential risks to personal safety. To address these concerns, the initiative made a concerted effort to provide safety materials and protective equipment to the youth groups participating in the waste management efforts. This included the distribution of essential items such as gloves, masks, and other appropriate protective gear. By ensuring that the young volunteers accessed the necessary safety equipment, the initiative aimed to enable them to carry out their responsibilities with a heightened level of protection.

7. Conscientization ignites young people for claiming and advocating climate financing to address affected communities

In late August 2024, an ActionAid's Ethiopia /AAE/ local partner named Young Women Christian Association/YWCA/ organized a national level advocacy workshop on climate finance and accountability with the support of Strategic partnership Agreement /SPA II/ project. In this workshop, the participants were drawn from youth climate networks, activists and environment protection groups, young people who advocate climate issues at national and global levels, and representatives from ministerial government offices and CSOs. During the workshop, a keynote speech was addressed from AAE about the key intervention areas relating to climate resilient sustainable agriculture and climate justice.

As part of the event, an expert from Ministry of Finance, CRGE Facility Programme Coordinator Mr Misganaw Eyassu presented a paper focusing on the impact of climate change in Ethiopia, the policy roadmap, governance structures and role of CRGE facility in climate finance. In the presentation, he emphasized about the source of climate finance for Ethiopia including the multilateral and bilateral agencies, Green Climate Fund/GCF/, Global Environment Facility/GEF/, Adaptation Fund and other sources. From the overview data of climate finance mobilization from 2011-2019, Ethiopia secured a total of USD 82 billion from the different sources including the 270 million USD from CRGE facility. The climate finance has been allocated for adaptation, mitigation and for both actions across different sectors; agriculture, livestock, forestry, industry and other sectors. Mr Misganaw pinpointed the existing trend of Ethiopia in absorbing the global climate finance with the proportion of 0.1%. He also stated as the Ethiopia government intends to allocate 0.5 to 1% of the annual national budget for greening activities.

After the presentation, participants raised questions and then the presenter explained about the procedure of GCF for 30% of the grant to be allocated for women benefits though challenges in practical implementation. In the case of accreditation, there has been discussion to bring Development Bank of Ethiopia to be accredited for accessing climate finance which will promote private sector engagement particularly relating to green jobs creation. In addition, Mr Misganaw spoke about the importance of young people engagement to determine and enhance the effect of climate finance on future generations considering the intersectionality of youth and climate finance.

Moreover, the panelists from MoPD, EPA as well as gender & climate consultant shared their experience about climate financing and their respective sectors actions to cope up with climate crisis. They also gave more explanations about engagement plan of sector offices, information provision, accountability mechanisms and necessity of young people to build their capacities in influencing authorities beside to participation in global spaces.

In a nutshell, the workshop ended up with identifying key issues for actions by different groups; consider climate finance as critical tool to tackling climate crises, promoting green jobs, ensure accountability, leveraging partnership and increase young people engagement with inclusive approach.

8. GP Ethiopia Trainer Becomes a Youth Sounding Board Member of EU in Ethiopia

Bisrat Fikadu, a 28-year-old project coordinator, trainer, and climate change activist, shared that his journey as a Project Coordinator at INGO, European Union Youth Sounding Board member (YSB), and Green Deal Chairperson has been highly impacted by his engagement with Global Platform/GP/ Ethiopia. GP is one of the spaces in ActionAid to increase young people engagement. Bisrat first joined GP Ethiopia as a youth volunteer before taking up a leadership position in the local GP. Bisrat expresses his engagement with GP as a tool to transform himself and his peers around him. "GP has transformed me in terms of developing myself by giving me the necessary training to develop my skills, which aided me through various activities, and provided areas for improvement, priceless in value, and collaboration" as he said. He then goes on to add that his success as a youth leader and career has been "profoundly shaped by my engagement with Global Platforms".

Bisrat has had the opportunity to attend different capacity building trainings that have supported him in defying barriers to youth participation. "Thanks to the GP, I have had the privilege of participating in training programs to enhance my leadership, project management, activism, and policy analysis skills. All of this training equipped me with the necessary tools and knowledge to navigate the most formidable challenges within my current engagement." These opportunities have helped Bisrat in making professional networking and fostered meaningful collaboration with his peers and experts across cultures and backgrounds. Relating to this, Bisrat states that building these networks and having the chance to engage in these activities have helped him "engage in a socially transformative impact towards the achievement of sustainable development and empowerment of young people through my involvement in GP."

Having taken up the role of Chairperson Green Deal, Bisrat has been able to apply global insights and many of the best practices shared through GP in developing and executing initiatives that promote environmental sustainability and advocate for green policies. "Relationships built within this network have informed me about global issues and enriched my understanding of them". Through the opportunity forwarded by the GP, Bisrat was able to apply and get selected for the Youth Sounding Board organized by the European Union in June 2024. "Looking ahead, I remain committed to further learning and contribution, and I could make use of all these experiences in service of positive change within my community and beyond." GP has supported and empowered Bisrat to be an active member and youth among his peers striving towards inclusion and participation of young people in civic spaces.

9. Young people Collective Action and influencing capacity ease burden for young woman with disability

In the Semien Bench District of the Bench Sheko Zone in the Southwest Region of Ethiopia, the community faced a significant challenge when a new tax law was imposed. This law levied high taxes on landowners, including small landowners, business persons, and many residents were unable to afford the payments.

Among those affected community members, a young woman with disability and operating small commodities' shop business from Genja cluster Kebele affected with the levy of high tax. She has a limited income and asked to pay 1800 birr in taxes, which posed a significant burden given her circumstances. The intersectionality of young woman's situation, as a person with a disability, put her at a disadvantage compared to her peers.

In June 2024, one of the executive members of the local GP/Genja Youth Association/, who have participated and worked at the tax revenue office at the district level, recognized this issue as a problem. He has been selected as task force members in collection of taxes by representing young people once he has gained leadership and decision-making skills during his engagement in the local GP. Acknowledging that he could not help a young woman on his own, the young GP member discussed the matter with his peers in the local group.

The GPs, who had been trained on active citizenship, recognized the unfairness of the situation. The youth of Genja took it upon themselves to advocate for young woman, understanding that the tax distribution system did not adequately account for those with disabilities or marginalized communities.

Instead of simply collecting the taxes as mandated, the Genja local GP contacted the local bodies responsible for tax regulation and presented the young woman's case. Thanks to their efforts, young woman's situation improved significantly. The local authorities agreed to modify her tax obligation, decreasing it from 1800 birr to 200-birr, which Almaz was then able to pay. This example demonstrates the power of active citizenship and the ability of community members to advocate for those facing disproportionate challenges, even in the face of unfair policies.

10. A Young Woman, who was a local GP Leader Gets Government Leadership Position in Guna LRP

Her name is Abebu Derese, 28 years old young woman and was a GP leader in Guna. She is living in Northwest Ethiopia at Kimiredingay town, which is located at the center of Guna Mountain. She is one of the young women activists and a founder of the Rama Voluntary Youth Association. It is a local GP and has currently 24 active youth members which are working in Guna district and the surrounding areas on youth-led spaces, climate change, good governance and humanitarian crisis issues. Rama Voluntary Youth Association embraces a network of basic youth groups in four kebeles.

Abebu came to Rama's leadership position in November 2022 when elections were held to elect the leaders of the Rama Voluntary Youth Association. Before joining the GP, Abebu decided to migrate to South Asia due to the lack of employment after completing her degree. She said "there are many young people in the Guna like me who have finished their degrees; All they hoped for government's jobs; But there was no government job, and if it had, it was not fair. This has been discouraging many young people and forced them to make dangerous choices like migration." After joining GP, Abebu was elected as a leader in the Rama local GP. During her leadership, she made efforts and achieved several changes and success for her association together with her colleagues. Among the key achievements; increasing the number of young people particularly young women members. When she took over the local GP, there was only total of 10 members, but the number of members had reached 28 with her inspiration and leadership. She states that SPA II programs and GP capacity building such as safe space and active citizenship training have contributed to her knowledge and skills as a leader. She was able to exercise effective networking and partnership skills with government stakeholders, CSOs, and other youth associations to achieve the the local GP's advocacy efforts in various platforms. During her leadership period she gave priority and greater emphasis to young women and girls. Together with her co-activist girl members in the young women and girls safe space, they started the initiation of the "equal job opportunities and equal payment for all genders" social movement in Guna. They conducted formative research to influence the local council and administration to adopt the proclamation of "equal job opportunities and equal payment for all genders" and make decisions. Following this, the local cabinet and counsel decided to rectify the local proclamation on this issue dated on July 12, 2024.

In the area where Abebu lives, there are several gender and social norms which are barriers and hindering women and girls come in front and get leadership positions. Young people do not have a leadership opportunity since there are negative social norms attached to them. Very few of them get the opportunity to be in leadership positions without being required to have other ties.

Rama Voluntary Youth Association, led by Abebu, designed a strategy to get formal and informal leadership opportunities in Guna and to engage directly on decision-making process that has been affecting young people. They called this strategy "Shadow leadership" meaning they exercised leadership shoulder-to-shoulder with adults and local cabinets. As the first step of this strategy, Rama local GP decided to convince the local duty bearers (Cabinet) with the purpose of giving them an internship in a government office. Unfortunately, a local conflict erupted, and the district government was terminated without going as planned. When relative peace comes in the district, they have continued their efforts and Abebu was selected to get the first internship opportunity and was assigned to the Guna District Revenue and Tax Administration Office. For the 6 months period, she made an effort to show her accumulated skills and knowledge in leadership and decision-making during her internship time. She stated that the knowledge, skills, and experience she had grasped through the SPA II modalities like GP and P4C contributed greatly to making her a successful candidate.

Finally, Rama's designed strategy has met its goal, and Abebu has shown her leadership skills and experience very convincingly. Following this, Abebu received a legal appointment letter with great honor to lead the Guna district Vocational and Technical office. As she and her co-members said they are happy with this decision of the government. On her part, Abebu said "the leadership position given to me is an opportunity for me to work on behalf of all the youth as their voices and to restore the hopes of the local youth." The Rama members also stated that they consider this decision as a great opportunity for their association and the rest of YP in Guna.
